WEDDING BELLS

CONROY—SPRING.

An exceedingly pretty autumn wedding took place in Bath United Church on September 20th, at eleven o'clock, when Rev. S. Dixon united in marriage Mildred Hazel, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Spring, Bath, to James Wilkynson Conroy, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Conroy, of Toronto.

The bride, who entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Miss Dorothy Hinds, of Toronto, was given in marriage by her father and looked a picture of youthful loveliness in a sleeveless gown of powder blue crepe romaine made bouffant style, with silver lace and fresh flowers, and a silver sequin and blue velvet hat, white satin slippers, and long white kid gloves completed her costume. She carried a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses and baby breath. Miss Vera Curran, Bath, acted as bridesmaid, gowned in flesh georgette, with French lace, and wore a large picture hat to match. She carried a shower bouquet of Butterfly roses. Little Miss Norma Thompson, niece of the bride was a dainty flower bearer in white crepe-de-chine, with streamers of blue satin ribbons. She carried a basket of pink and white carnations, while the wedding ring was placed. Mr. Douglas Hughes, of Toronto, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Harold McDonald, of Bath, and Mr. Alex Curran, of Toronto.

Miss Helen Hinds sang very sweetly, "Until," and during the signing of the register "Because."

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, to about fifty guests. And here the guests had an opportunity of viewing the many beautiful gifts, among which was a handsome dinner set (Bird of Paradise pattern) from the firm of the Crown Life Insurance Co., of Toronto, and from the staff of this firm, of which the bride was an employee, a silver bread tray. The young couple received congratulations in the drawing room, which was most artistically arranged with quantities of beautiful autumn blooms and white bells. Their mothers received with them, Mrs. Conroy dressed in black georgette with touches of blue, and Mrs. Spring in black chiffon velvet with silver trimmings and a corsage bouquet of sweet peas. The bride's table was decorated with blue and white with vases of roses centred with the wedding cake.

Toasts were proposed by Mr. Fred Hamm and Rev. Dixon, and very ably responded to by the groom and the bride's parents.

The groom's gift to his bride was an oak dinner wagon, to the bridesmaid a solosz silver bracelet watch, to the pianist a gold necklace, the ring bearer a signet ring, and to the best man and ushers, initialed cuff links.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Conroy left by motor, amid showers of confetti and good wishes, for London, Buffalo and Detroit, the bride travelling in a rose beige georgette dress with hat, coat and shoes to match.

Miss Jane Curran caught the bride's bouquet, which she threw from the stairs before leaving.

Mr. Conroy, senior, and the groom, held a reception at her home. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Conroy, Jr., will reside at 81810 Queen St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Those from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Palmer and daughter, Sylvia, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Nicholson, of Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Conroy, of Toronto; Miss Irene Curran, of Boston; the Misses Dorothy and Helen Hinds, Toronto; Messrs. Alex Curran and Douglas Hughes, of Toronto.

Oliver and family, Deseronto; Mrs. Chas. Storey, Point Anne; and Mrs. Earl Whiteman and family, Shannonville and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Dafoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Busby spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred McFarlane.

Mr. Charlie Pringle sports a car.

Miss Muriel Harte left on Sunday for Guelph, where she intends training for a nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Root and Miss Marguerite Root, Napanee, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank McConnell spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Tyner, Lime Lake.

A large crowd attended Mrs. N. Richmond's sale on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Kimmett and Mr. and Mrs. John Kimmett spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Milligan, Tamworth.

OBITUARY

MRS. E. R. McCABE.

Just as the church bells were pealing for the Rally Day services on Sunday morning, the spirit of Mrs. E. R. McCabe, South Napanee, took its flight and the tired body was at rest.

For the past four and a half years the deceased had been an intense sufferer and her death came as a happy release. During all those years she had suffered from an incurable malady, and in spite of the best of medical care and nursing, both at home and the Kingston General Hospital, nothing could be done to stay the disease.

The late Mrs. McCabe, whose maiden name was Selena Liddy, was a native of Weymouth, England, her father being the superintendent of police in that city. In company with her two sisters, she came to Canada when only 12 years of age. In early life she married Mr. E. R. McCabe and for nearly forty-three years resided in South Napanee.

During all these years she was a faithful member of the Wesleyan Methodist (now Grace United) Church, and was ready at all times to assist in any part of the church work. She was also a Society she worked zealously for years and a few years ago was elected President. She was one of the Charter members of Queen of Sheba Rebekah Lodge and had attended only a few meeting when her illness began, and from which she never rallied.

Besides her bereaved husband she leaves to mourn her loss an only daughter, Mrs. B. M. Black, also one sister, Mrs. Adelaide Bland, of Toronto.

JAMES A. HOSEY.

James A. Hosey, aged 53 years, died unexpectedly at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles Fanning, on State street, Middleport, N.Y., last Sunday evening, following a heart attack. He had apparently been in the best of health and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Fanning driving through the country. Shortly after returning in the evening, he complained of not feeling well and said he would go to his room. He had scarcely reached his room when he called for his sister and was unable to get into bed alone. Mr. Fanning immediately called the doctor and by the time he arrived Mr. Hosey was sinking rapidly. The doctor held out no hope for his recovery and within an hour he passed on.

Mr. Hosey was an expert telegrapher and spent most of his life with the Associated Press and United Press, during which time he had been assigned to various metropolitan newspapers throughout the country. His handling of market reports made him very familiar with bond and stock markets, and through thrift and wise investments in sound securities, he was able to retire from active work a few years ago, deciding to spend his good remaining years enjoying life, rather than acquiring wealth. This was a possible for him to spend a considerable portion of his time with his sister in Middleport.

He spent most of his past two summers in Middleport, and frequently visited there during the winter. He was of a retiring disposition and comparatively few knew him intimately. His wide experience on newspapers made him very familiar with the various phases of all current topics and he was a delightful conversationalist for those who enjoyed a close acquaintance, with his broad views and intimate knowledge of public affairs.

The funeral service was held at the Fanning residence at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Dr. Charles Collins, of the Methodist church, officiating. It was the kind of service Mr. Hosey had indicated he would have preferred.

The remains were shipped to Napanee, Canada, his old home, Wednesday afternoon, for interment in the family lot.

Besides his sister, Mrs. Fanning, he leaves another sister, Miss Ola Hosey, nurse in Greig Public School, as well as at White Plains, N.Y., and two brothers, J. S. Hosey, of Ottawa, Canada, and W. S. Hosey, of Middleport, N.Y. —Niagara Herald, of Middleport, N. Y.

TAMWORTH.

Another fire occurred in the village on Thursday night, it broke out at the home of Claude Williams about 5 a.m., and although the fire was put out, it started again at 6.30 p.m. and burned the house. Very little was saved and the house was only partly covered with insurance.

Mr. Wm. Holden is building a new showroom.

Mr. James Anderson has bought Mr. E. McKim's property on Bridge St. Carscallen has had electric metres put in the houses.

Mrs. Adair has had some improvements made on her home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Wallace, manager of the Tamworth Creamery, recently visited Toronto.

Many people are now duck hunting.

The threshers are very busy in the surrounding district.

Mr. Thomas Kearns has returned to the States after spending some time at his home.

Many from here attended the dance at Enterprise Friday evening.

Mr. Claude Williams and family visited at Mrs. N. H. Hinchey's, Elm Tree.

Mr. W. Scott and Leslie Scott, of Arden, were recent visitors in town.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

EVENING VOCATIONAL CLASSES.

Evening classes open on Tuesday evening, October 3rd, at seven o'clock. The classes are rapidly filling up and there will probably be a large attendance this year. There are two or three new classes which will prove attractive. The senior class in mathematics and physics will be a real enjoyment for those who like mathematics, as well as of practical value to all who attend it. Anyone who has taken the junior class, or has taken junior mathematics in high school, will be able to follow the work, which will deal with the application of geometry, algebra, trigonometry and physics to practical problems of everyday type. A class in commercial French, which will be largely conversational and dealing with French letters, should prove interesting and useful in a bi-lingual country. A minimum of grammar and a maximum of reading will be the aim of this course. The class in Literature should be appreciated by those who wish to broaden their knowledge of the best in either English prose or poetry. This class will meet every Tuesday at seven o'clock, and will be extensive rather than an intensive study. All desiring to register in any of these classes do so at the Collegiate office any Tuesday or Thursday from seven to eight o'clock.

SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

Nominations for the Students' Council took place on Thursday afternoon and the election on Friday. At previous party meetings, the Athenians and Spartans had elected their presidents, and each party placed two candidates before the girls and a boy. On Thursday, after classes, the nomination meeting was held, and each party presented its platform. Leslie Merritt and Jean Milling for the Athenians, and Munro Beattie and Lois Stalker for the Spartans, gave three-minute addresses, which were very creditably given and were received with hearty applause. The names of the candidates were read, and instructions were given in ballot voting. On Friday afternoon the ballots were distributed and interest was very keen until all the returns were in. It was found that in both first forms the vote was a tie, and a new election will be necessary. In the rest of the forms the Spartans were leading by a majority of four. The following were elected:

Athenian Leader—Leslie Merritt.

Spartan Leader—Munro Beattie.

Boys' Athletics—Robert Howitt, (Athen.)

Girls' Athletics—Marjorie Daly (Athen.)

Form 5—Helen Lancaster and Dolph McFadden (Spartans).

Form 4—Lois Stalker and Charles Walters (Spartans).

Form 3 B—Dorothy Wilson (Spartan) and Harry Robinson (Athenian.)

Form 3 A—Dorothy Scott and Albert Herrington (Spartans.)

Form 2 B—Jack Archer and Margaret Denison (Spartans.)

Form 2 A—Eyn Asselstine and Walter Hagerman (Athen.)

ATHLETICS.

The football team, accompanied by Principal Beattie and Mr. Eppell, travelled to Picton on Saturday to play the opening game of the season, and were defeated by the Picton Collegiate by a score of 3 to 0. This is the first year that the N. C. I. has been entered in the C.R.F.U. Intermediate series, and the team showing made by the team, which was more than half junior material, was very creditable. The Napanee team had only six players of last year's team, while the remaining twelve boys were first year players, three who played being in the first form. Picton's team, with the exception of one player, was mature from last year, and had the added advantage of superior weight. In spite of these handicaps, the Napanee boys played to the finish, and in spite of their size showed that off the premiums needed to better condition in the final quarter, when Dolph McFadden went through the line for the touch-down which decided the game. Merritt converted for the six points. The experience gained was valuable, and it will be a much better team which lines up against Deseronto here on Wednesday at 3.30.

If the supporters of amateur athletics wish to have a regular yearly schedule of C.F.R.U. football, they should support the team this year by paying out to the home games. The presence of a crowd of supporters will help the boys during their play, and in a year or two they will build up an experienced team which will hold its own against the other schools of the C.F.R.U. The line-up for last Saturday was as follows:

Snap—H. Kinkley and A. Harrison.

Backs—A. Dean, R. Stalker, W. Hart, A. Frink.

Middles—R. Howitt, W. Howitt.

Outsides—W. Exley (Capt.), C. Amey, F. Oliver.

Quarter—H. Robinson.

Halves—R. Asselstine, L. Merritt, D. McFadden, D. Conway.

Flying Wing—H. Moore, H. Webster.

Referee—J. W. Howard, Belleville.

Umpire—C. A. Shoemaker, B.S. A., Napanee.

PRESBYTERY MET IN NAPANEE

BELLEVILLE BODY DID LARGE AMOUNT OF BUSINESS—OPTIMISTIC REPORTS.

The Belleville Presbytery in the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada met in Grace Church, Napanee, Friday afternoon at 9.30 a.m., with Rev. L. S. Wight in the chair. After the devotional exercises the men, who had been transferred into the Presbytery by the action of recent conferences, were introduced to the court and were cordially welcomed by the chairman. Rev. F. M. Wooten, of Picton, made a brief reply.

The roll was called and was answered by 100 ministers and laymen, after which Rev. W. D. Harrison was elected chairman and Rev. G. R. C. McQuade was re-elected secretary and Mr. H. C. Martin of Stirling, was re-elected treasurer. Rev. Dr. Solandt, on behalf of the Board of Review, presented its report. The court adjourned for lunch at 12 a.m. Committees on their knees 1.00 p.m. Presbytery re-convened at 2 p.m.

The report of the maintenance and missionary fund was presented by Rev. T. S. Mallott, to which several spoke.

Mr. W. H. Ackerman told of the increased allocations to the conference to $330,000, an increase of $10,000 — of this amount Belleville Presbytery is asked to provide for $2,500. The speaker pointed out that two years ago this Presbytery raised 72 per cent. of this allotment. Last year it raised 80 per cent. The speaker urged that a further increase be made this year.

Dr. J. C. Robertson spoke from his own experience, showing how this could be accomplished through an every-member canvass at the beginning of the year, together with a special appeal near the end of the year, not forgetting the young people and Sunday schools. He advocated making special use of The Record and the literature provided by the committee. Dr. Robertson also spoke regarding the laymen's conference to be held in Toronto, October 5th, 6th, and 7th, and suggested that the following Sunday be Laymen's Sunday.

Dr. Mallott reminded Presbytery that the motion in having Dr. Gunn as Moderator, and pointed out that the first year of the administration was given to the subject of unity, second year to orgaization and then issued a challenge to the whole church to co-operate with him in the consecration to God. "Only so can we accomplish our task, said the speaker. "Unless further unity we charge send more money to the treasurer monthly and thus help to reduce the huge sum of money—$2,000,000—that we have to be paid annually to bank overdraft.

Dr. Bishop reported progress on two items with regard to Albert College, these being the items of quality in students and number of students. He was optimistic re the future of the college and urged that the Presbytery get behind the proposed Bedford Park Presbyterian Society which was proposed last year.

The committees of Religious Education and Social Service and Social Service gave a joint report, in which they called attention to the article on "Spiritual Life" in the new edition of Hymnology, urged that greater attention be paid to the festival days of the church years; the great need of advancement toward temperance among the youth, and recommended a faithful attendance upon the Rally Day Service to be held in Bridge Street Church, Belleville, on Tuesday, October 16th, at which Rev. Henry Carter, of London, England, will be the great attraction.

The Stewardship Committee recommended the adoption of the tithing system, which would include—time, talents and money.

Ministers were reminded that in view of the new constitution of the pension fund, which will come into force at the beginning of the new year, it was pointed out that the ministers pay 6½ per cent. of all the premiums needed to provide for their own pensions, the remaining 6 per cent. being provided by interest on investments. The 9 per cent. voted from the M. and M. Fund to the Pension Fund, is all paid to widows and orphans.

The Finance Committee reported the funds of the Presbytery in good condition and recommended that the levy for the coming year be 8c. per unit for Conference expenses and 5c. per unit for Presbytery expenses, and that the rate of remuneration for travelling expenses of delegates be 5c. per mile each way.

Rev. G. I. Campbell urged a mission of personal evangeli-m in every charge.

The Presbytery was closed at 6 p.m. with prayer and benediction by the chairman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY G. C. TRUMBULL,
(Editor of The Sunday School Times.)

PAUL IN EPHESUS.

Sunday, Oct. 7, 1928—Acts 19: 1-41; Ephesians 4:1-16.

Golden Text—For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should wal kin them. (Eph. 2: 10.)

Paul's ministry in Ephesus was one of the most remarkable parts of his life-work. It was bold, uncompromising as always, and secured such a tremendous hearing as it continued for three years, that it became a strategic achievement in the evangelization of the Roman Province of Asia.

It was marked by clear doctrinal teaching, it reached both Jews and Gentiles, it included systematic daily teaching, it was signalized by special miracles, it confronted and defeated the evil spirit world, it won sincere Christian converts from among the leaders of false cults, and it culminated in a city-wide attack upon Christianity by the leading religious and business interest.

Further, Paul's founding and building up of the church at Ephesus resulted in his writing, by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, one of the richest of all the rich New Testament Epistles —to the Ephesians We should be impoverished indeed if that Letter were not in the list of books.

There is a good deal of confusion today as to what is called the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The first six verses of this lesson chapter throw light on this, if we are careful to note the correct translation as given in the Revised Version. Paul found certain disciples at Ephesus, and asked them, "Did ye receive the Holy Spirit when ye believed?" When he found that they were ignorant of the Holy Spirit, he discovered that they had gotten no farther, spiritually, than John's baptism—that is, the call of John the Baptist to repent of sin. Then Paul told them about believing on Christ Jesus; they did so, and "were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus" and, "when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Spirit came on them."

In other words, it is plain that the Holy Ghost is given to every one by faith in Christ as Saviour, not as a special gift or experience to certain Christian believers at some time subsequent to their conversion and new birth. But believers need to yield wholly to the Spirit if they would be filled with the Spirit. If by sin of any sort they should grieve or quench the Holy Spirit, they need to be filled again, by confessing their sin to God and then trusting Him for His fulness. "One baptism, many fillings."

Paul gave the Gospel and other Scriptural truth so clearly, directly, and with such intense personal application, that men could not be indifferent; either they accepted Christ, or they openly opposed Christ and His way. It would be well if all preaching today were as positive and inescapable as this. When Paul found certain people thoroughly antagonistic he wasted no time in argument, but turned away from them, and then, taking disciples with him, he continued his daily teaching service "in the school of one Tyrannus." Preaching is not enough; teaching is also needed, the Lord and the apostles did both.

It is significant that, in the midst of this testimony and teaching, "God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul." Not merely miracles, wonderful and supernatural as those are, but special miracles. They must have been astounding. Indeed, we read that when handkerchiefs or aprons were taken from Paul's body and carried to the sick they were healed of their diseases, and evil spirits were cast out of them. But when certain "vagabond Jews, exorcists, attempted to imitate Paul and cast out evil spirits by naming the name of the Lord Jesus, they got into trouble. An evil spirit, with the cry, "Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?" forced the man whose body he was possessing to leap upon these Jews, attack them, till they "fled out of that home naked and wounded." Let us have no doubt about the fact of demon possession. It is recorded over and over in the Scriptures.

All this was tremendous "advertising" for the Gospel; it challenged thinking people; believers multiplied, open confessions were made, sins were repented of and abandoned. Even priests or ministers of false religions brought their evil books to a public place and burned them; the value of the volumes destroyed was fifty thousand pieces of silver. Men cannot say that the evangelism fails to have practical results.

Finally the business of the silversmiths who made silver shrines for Diana, the pagan goddess whose famous temple was in Ephesus, were aroused to opposition as one of their craftsmen called them together and told them their business and wealth were being threatened by Paul and his preaching, and that the temple and pre-eminence of the goddess Diana were in danger of complete disregard.

This precipitated a riot. It spread through the whole city. Paul was kept away from it by his disciples, but two of his Christian companions were rushed into the open air theatre, where the mob had assembled. Finally the Town Clerk, by a sensible and logical address, quieted the mob and persuaded them to take up their grievance in a lawful way rather than by mob law.

God had overruled, and doubtless made the wrath of man to praise Him in this incident, for it seems likely that it brought the claims and truth of the Gospel home to a still larger number.

Telephone Accounts

dated October 1st, which local subscribers will receive within a few days, will be accompanied by notices explaining important changes in future accounts.

To simplify and expedite our billing work, we have divided our exchanges into six groups. Each group will receive accounts under one of six different dates. In that way the work of preparing thousands of accounts will be spread evenly over the whole month.

In future the accounts of local subscribers will be dated the twenty-sixth of each month.

You will appreciate the new form of account we are introducing at the same time which will have all the figures clearly printed and accurately totalled by machines. In addition, charges will be shown right up to the date of the account.

The plan is explained more fully in notices which accompany October 1st accounts. Our Business Office people will be pleased to give you further information.

WORLD'S FOOD SUPPLY.

Dr. Barnard Says Chemist Will Be Able to Solve Problem.

The spectre of starvation pressing on an over-populated world is somewhat the chemist refuses to worry about. Economists and sociologists have concerned themselves over the population problem ever since Malthus worked out a statistical expression of it over a century ago, but they always assume unchanging needs and tastes on the part of the population, and unchanging methods for the production of food.

At the meeting of the Institute of Chemical Society at Evanston, Ill. recently, Dr. H. E. Barnard, of Indianapolis, challenged these assumptions, and declared that the chemist will be able to meet the food problems of any imaginable future population. The only thing that can limit the race is sheer lack of standing room, he said.

"The sociologist and economist study the Malthusian doctrine very differently from the chemist," Dr. Barnard continued. "They would limit world population to the number of people who could live happily and comfortably under the best living conditions to-day. The chemist is not so much interested in ideal living conditions as in applying scientific law to do the work of the world, no matter whether it is concerned with shelter or food or comfort.

"The chemist is impatient when he hears the Malthusian doctrine discussed in terms of wheat acreage, or mines, or fats, or fuels, and knows that when the fertile acres of the earth do not produce crops sufficient for man's needs he can synthesize them in his laboratory. Indeed, he is already doing it. When the need comes the chemist will convert the light of the sun and the nitrogen of the air into food for the human family. Thirty men working in a factory the size of a city block can produce in the form of yeast as much food as 1,000 men tilling 57,000 acres under ordinary agricultural conditions. To the chemist the Malthusian doctrine is but the sad reflection of a pessimistic world."

ABE WELCOMED.

Chinaman Is Valuable Citizen In the Malay Peninsula.

Asiatics may be a menace to Western Canada and he agrees with their exclusion, but A. P. Ager, of Singapore, knows one country where Chinese are at a premium.

Mr. Ager, who passed through Vancouver recently, says that throughout the Malay Peninsula the Chinaman is welcomed as a valuable citizen.

Although thousands of Chinese have been admitted already to the country, no year is held for its industry, he added. In Singapore alone, there are 250,000 Chinese, which is five-sixths of the population.

"The Chinaman is a natural trader," Mr. Ager continued, "and many thousands of immigrants have engaged in commerce on the peninsula. The Malay, the native, is a lazy fellow, but the Chinaman is a hard worker."

The Chinese as well as nearly all the other races of the settlement are represented on the Legislative Council, which shares the executive power with the governor, Mr. Ager said, although complete native self-government has not been seriously proposed, education and the knowledge of such experiments in government in Ceylon has increased the desire for it.

Chinese are engaged in shipping the principal business of Singapore and they are also heavily interested in the growing and marketing of rubber. Many of them own estates, and a still larger number do coolie work on the plantations.

WHENCE CAME WALTZ?

Dance Is an Evolution of a Religious Ceremony.

The waltz which now forms the foundation of modern dancing is a comparatively new comer in the terpsichorean field, but still has a lengthy history. This graceful movement did not emanate in its present form from the brain of a dancing master. Long before 1870, the time it was first mentioned under the name of waltz, it was displayed on the village greens.

The waltz first was danced in the church. The tambourine in use in this religious dance was called by St. Isadore "motte de symphonie," and evidently corresponded to the instrument which in the ancient sacred dances accompanied the flute, a sort of pipe invented two centuries before Christ.

As the religious dance of the Middle Ages is allied to the ancient sacred dance, so the waltz is an evolution of this religious dance, having passed through many changes before arriving in its present form. In the seventeenth century, when the Gregorian rite supplanted the Moorish rite, the dance disappeared from the church.

War on Smoke In Berlin.

The use of electric engines for drawing express trains so long as they are within the city's boundaries in order to purify the air, will be introduced in Berlin in the near future on the lines running to the west and east. This would involve the trains to and from London, Paris, Cologne, Warsaw, Moscow, Riga and the Balkans. In this connection, it is interesting to note, not less than 92 miles of German Reichs railways have been electrified already.

SOMETIME

Sometime when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here had spurned,
The things o'er which we grieve with lashes wet,
Will flash before us out of the dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue ;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me ;
How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,
Because His wisdom to the end could see ;
And even as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
The sweetest things, because it seemeth good.

And if, sometimes, commingled with the wine
We find the wormwood, and rebel the colder sign,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out this portion for our lips to drink ;
And if someone we love is lying low,
Where human kisses cannot reach the face,
Oh, do not blame the loving Father so,
But bear your sorrow with obedient grace.

And you will shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God gives His friend,
And that sometimes the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon His love can send.
If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart !
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white unfold.
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart ;
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we will say : "God knew the best."

—Mary Riley Smith.

HUMAN-SHAPED FISH

Two Fine Specimens of Rare Dugong Species Found In the Gulf of Aden.

The crew of a fishing lugger operating in the Gulf of Aden, recently brought up from the bed of the sea, the bodies of a rare species of dugong: species, those strange, human-shaped fish which are believed to be the foundation of the old time belief in mermaids and mermen.

Nothing approaching their appearance has been known since records which claimed that a mermaid was captured at Bangor, in Belfast Lough. This strange visitor was no only baptized, but admitted into the brotherhood of saints, where the dugongs are to this day as St. Murgen.

When the capture in the Gulf of Aden was first reported, it was thought that the strange wave of the South African dugong, or manatee type, which is also found on the coast of Cuba, undoubtedly to mermaids belong to both classes, as a class not defined.

The upper portion of the body has a human form, and the arms, with their short arms, and in this position the outline of the human form is more apparent. The mantle of whalline, hips and breasts are so human like that they have attracted zoological authorities all over the world. This wave of interest was somewhat badly for exhibition and research, also do the American museums ; but for some superstitious belief or other the owners will not part with their charges. They regard them as "souls of the dead."

The real fact of the matter probably is that they are attracting so many crowds ashore from the big liners which call at Aden that they are likely to become a nuisance to the town, and under no consideration will the vendors in trinkets, fans, amber beads and ostrich feathers part with them. For is it not written, say these sages, that mermaids "bring prosperity in their trail, and once they are betrayed ruin follows in their path."

This is the sort of stuff that is being handed out among the natives who caught the mermaids, but it is true also that thousands of visitors daily pay to see them.

Scientists recall that remains of early types of sirenians which up to now were thought extinct, have been found in the Eocene deposits of Egypt. They were the creatures which carry their offsprings in their arms, taking care to keep its head out of the water as well as their own in the same manner as the dugong and seacow.

When not carrying their young this species have been seen by sailors swimming close to the surface of a calm sea with their heads well raised out of the water. On the approach of a ship they have dived below the surface, flinging their long tails in the air. It is this antic which gave the rise to the idea among old-time sailors that mermaids inhabited the tropical seas.

History records that a "merman" was caught off the coast of Suffolk in 1187 and kept prisoner in Oxford Castle until he died six months later. Another record shows that a "mermaid" lived in a tank at Brighton for eighteen months.

An authority told a representative that he thought these two creatures belonged to the Rytina class, which were exterminated in the northern seas many years after they were discovered by Steller, a scientist who was attached to an expedition that was shipwrecked on an island in the Bering straits.

Steller and his companions reported when rescued that for nearly a year they lived on the flesh of the Rytina, which was so tame that it allowed itself to be caught. They found that its flesh resembled that of veal.

The form of this mammal, with its seal-like head, was the nearest to that of the mythical mermaid. Steller's description is the nearest approach to that of the Aden prodigies.

Cats and Weather.

Are cats weather prophets? Do their highly - strung nervous system respond to changes in the atmosphere? It is an old belief that good weather may be expected when the cat washes herself, but bad when she licks her coat against the grain, or washes herself over the ears, or sits with her tail to the fire. In superstitious days puss's response to a coming change in the weather was thought to mean that she had some control over it. A confusion of cause with effect. So sailors were afraid to provoke a cat; in fact, they did not like a cat on board ship at all. A frisky cat made them quote the saying: "A cat has a gale of wind in her tail." The way to raise a gale was to throw a cat overboard. Ruffles on a calm surface from a rising wind are still called "cats' paws." In some parts of England a popular name for the stormy petrel, which is the "cat's mice."

Drydock Hewn In Rock.

There has just been inaugurated in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro a new drydock of large dimension and unusual construction. This dock, which has been named Dock Arthur Bernardes in honor of Brazil's last president, has been hewn for the greater part out of the solid rock of the Ilha des Cobras, or Snake Island, in the bay, and is 840 feet long by 145 feet wide and 39 feet high. It is intended for use by warships of the Brazilian navy and will also accommodate passenger liners of the largest size. Auxiliary equipment has still to be installed before the dock can be put into regular use, when it will undoubtedly prove a valuable addition to what is already one of the finest harbors in the world.—Christian Science Monitor.

Island of Churches.

Patmos, the island where St. John was exiled and where he had his vision described in the "Book of the Revelation," contains the ruins of 300 churches. That was about one church for each couple of families, as there are only 700 houses. Though close to Turkey, the island has never contained a mosque. The population is Greek and their only occupation, sponge-fishing. At one time they manufactured stockings.

Silas Hockings recalls a prayer he once heard at a prayer-meeting about this island from a brother with more zeal than education. "Stir us up," he cried with uplifted hands, "We've been sitting so long at ease in Zion we've got right on the flats. We want flin' we do. O Lord, lie us, lie us with the Isle of Patmos!"

Travelling School's Promising Trio

More good than a row of medals pinned on them is the value three young lads from the backwoods of Ontario will derive from a wonderful week spent in Toronto. These three boys are: Rene Thibault, aged 14 years, French-Canadian from Rapides de Sesenge Kingston, a little 5-year-old Indian of Wye, and John Paul Paquette, French-Canadian of Esher, aged 16 years. They are ardent pupils of the Canadian Pacific Railway travelling school car, and are up betimes each morning to attend the school on wheels it spends in each month on a siding in their section of the North. Their teacher, Mr. McNally, chose three boys to spend a week in Toronto and the Canadian National Exhibition, as guests of Premier Ferguson, from the entrance class of the Normal School, and the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Bewildered by all he saw young George Kingston scarcely spoke, although he is learning English rapidly, and even the smallest thing he saw brought a shy smile. He had never been upstairs until he boarded the train that brought him to the city, and the largest body of people he had seen together at one time was 30. He was intensely interested in mirrors and elevators and his pockets were stuffed with a collection of mechanical toys. He has not yet mustered up enough courage to talk on a telephone and when he saw a parade of cadets in their bright red tunics it was difficult to hold him back. The two older boys were most interested in aeroplanes and the animals they saw at the exhibition.

SMOKE BELLEW

BY JACK LONDON.

Copyright, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate.

In every cabin they visited that night they found a similar situation. Scurvy had smitten the whole camp. Originally there had been ninety-three men and women. But ten had died, and two had recently disappeared. Smoke told of finding the two and expressed surprise that none had gone that short distance down the trail to find out for themselves. What paralyzed him and Shorty was the helplessness of these people. Their cabins were littered and dirty. A cabin's troubles were its own troubles, and already they had ceased from the exertion of burying their dead.

"It's almost weird," Smoke confided to Shorty. "I've met shirkers and loafers, but I never met so many all at one time. You heard what they said. They've never done a tap. I'll bet they haven't washed their own faces. No wonder they got scurvy."

"But vegetarians hadn't ought to get scurvy," Shorty contended. "It's the salt meat eaters that's supposed to fall for it. And they don't eat meat, salt or fresh, raw or cooked, or any other way."

Smoke shook his head. "I know. And it's vegetable diet that cures scurvy. No drugs will do it. Vegetables, especially potatoes, are the only dope. But don't forget one thing, Shorty: we are not up against a theory, but a condition. The fact is these grass eaters have all got scurvy."

"Must be contagious."

"No. That the doctors do know. Scurvy is not a germ disease. It can't be caught. It's generated. As near as I can get it, it's due to an impoverished condition of the blood. Its cause is not something they've got, but something they haven't got. A man gets scurvy for lack of certain chemicals in his blood, and those chemicals don't come out of powders and bottles, but do come out of vegetables."

"An' these people eats nothin' but grass," Shorty groaned. "An' they've got it up to their ears. That proves you're all wrong, Smoke. You're spielin a theory, but this condition sure knocks the spots out o' your theory. Scurvy's catchin', an' that's why they've all got it, an' rotten bad at that. You an' me'll get it too if we hang around this diggin'."

Smoke laughed skeptically and knocked on a cabin door.

"What do you want?" came a woman's sharp voice.

"We want to see you." Smoke answered.

"Who are you?"

"Two doctors from Dawson," Shorty blurted in, with a levity that brought a punch in the short ribs from Smoke's elbow.

"Don't want to see any doctors," the woman said in tones crisp and staccato. "Go away. Good night. We don't believe in doctors."

Smoke pulled the latch, shoved the door open and entered, turning up the low flamed kerosene lamp so that he could see. In four bunks tour women ceased from groaning and sighing to stare at the intruders. Two were young, thin faced creatures; the third was an elderly and very stout woman, and the fourth, the one whom Smoke identified by her voice, was the thinnest, frailest specimen of the human race he had ever seen.

As he quickly learned, she was Laura Sibley, the seeress and professional clairvoyant, who had organized the expedition in Los Angeles and sold it to this death camp on the Northwest. The conversation that ensued was acrimonious. Laura Sibley did not believe in doctors; also, to add to her purgatory, she had well nigh ceased to believe in herself.

"Why didn't you send out for help?" Smoke asked when she paused breathless and exhausted from her initial tirade. "There's a camp at Stewart river, and eighteen days travel would fetch Dawson from here."

"Why didn't Amos Wentworth go?" she demanded, with a wrath that bordered on hysteria.

"Don't know the gentleman, Smoke countered. "What's he been doing?"

"Nothing, except that he's the only one that hasn't caught the scurvy. And why hasn't he caught the scurvy? I'll tell you. No, I won't. And what would have been the use? Don't I know? I'm not a fool. Our caches are filled with every kind of fruit juice and preserved vegetables. We are better situated than any other camp in Alaska to fight scurvy. There is no prepared vegetable, fruit and nut food we haven't, and in plenty."

"She's got you there, Smoke," Shorty exulted. "It's a condition, not a theory. You say vegetables cure. Here's the vegetables, an' where's the cure?"

"There's no explanation I can see," Smoke acknowledged. "Yet there is no camp in Alaska like this. I've seen scurvy—a sprinkling of cases here and there—but I never saw a whole camp with it, nor did I ever see such terrible cases, which is neither here nor there, Shorty. We've got to do what we can for these people, but first we've got to make camp and take care of the dogs. We'll see you in the morning—ee—Mrs. Sibley."

"Miss Sibley," she bridled. "And now, young man, if you 'come fooling around this cabin with any doctor stuff I'll fill you full of bird shot."

Next morning, after daylight, Smoke encountered a man carrying a heavy sled load of firewood. He was a little man, clean looking and spry, who walked briskly despite the load. Smoke experienced an immediate dislike.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked.

"Nothing," the little man answered. "I know that." Smoke said. "That's why I asked you. You're Amos Wentworth. Now, why under the sun haven't you the scurvy like all the rest?"

"Because I've exercised," came the quick reply. "There wasn't any need for any of them to get ill if they'd only got out and done something. What did they do? Growled and kicked and grouched at the cold, the long nights, the hardships, the aches and pains and everything else. They loafed in their beds until they swelled up and couldn't leave them, that's all. Look at me. I've worked. Come into my cabin."

Smoke followed him in.

"Squint around. Clean as a whistle eh? You bet. Everything shipshape. I wouldn't keep those chips and shavings on the floor except for the warmth but they're clean chips and shavings. You ought to see the floor in some of the shacks. Pigpens. As for me, I haven't eaten a meal off an unwashed dish. No, sir. If meant work, and I've worked. And I haven't the scurvy."

"You've bit the nail on the head," Smoke admitted. "But I see you've only one bunk. Why so unsociable?"

"Because I like to be. It's easier to clean up for one than three, that's why. The lazy blanket loafers! Do you think that I could have stood one around? No-wonder they got scurvy."

It was very convincing, but Smoke could not rid himself of his dislike of the man.

"What's Laura Sibley got it in for you for?" he asked abruptly.

Amos Wentworth shot a quick look at him. "She's a crank," was the reply. "So are we all cranks, for that matter But heaven save me from the crank that won't wash the dishes that he eats off of, and that's what this crowd of cranks are like."

A few minutes later Smoke was talking with Laura Sibley. Supported by a stick in either hand, she had panused in hobbling by his cabin.

"Who's been over out it in for Wentworth for?" he asked with a suddenness that caught her off her guard.

Her green eyes flashed bitterly and her sore lips writhed on the verge of unconsidered speech. But only a splutter of gasping, unintelligible sounds issued forth, and then, by a terrible effort, she controlled herself.

"Because he's healthy," she panted; "because he hasn't the scurvy; because he is supremely selfish; because he won't lift a hand to help anybody else; because he is letting us rot and die without lifting a finger to fetch us a pail of water or a load of firewood. That's the kind of a brute he is."

Still panting and gasping, she hobbled on her way, and five minutes afterward, coming out of the cabin to feed the dogs, Smoke saw her entering Amos Wentworth's cabin.

"Something rotten here, Shorty something rotten," he said, shaking his head. "We've got to make them hustle First thing they'll have to bury their dead. The strongest for the burial squad, then the next strongest on the firewood squad (they've been lying in their blankets to save wood), and so on down the line. And spruce tea. Mustn't forget that. All the soup doughs sweep by it. These people have never even heard of it.

"We sure got ours cut out for us, Shorty grinned. "First thing we know we'll be full of lead."

"And that's our first job," Smoke said.

In the next hour each of the twenty odd cabins was raided. All ammunition and every rifle shotgun and revolver was confiscated

"Come on, you livvids," was Shorty's method "Shoorth trone—fork em over We need em."

"Who says so?" was the query at the first cabin

"Two doctors from Dawson," was Shorty's answer "An what they say goes Come on. Shell out ammunition too."

"What do you want them for?"

"To stand off a war party of canned beef comin down the canyon. And I'm givin' you fair warnin of a spruce tea invasion Come across."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Five Hundred Dollars a Potato."

PERSUADING, bullying, and, at times, by main strength, men were drugged from their bunks and forced to dress. Smoke selected the mildest cases for the burial squad. Another squad was told off to supply the wood by which the graves were burned down into the frozen muck and gravel. Still another squad had to chop firewood and impartially supply every cabin. Those who were too weak for outdoor work were put to cleaning and scrubbing the cabins and washing clothes. One squad brought in many loads of spruce boughs and every stove was used for the brewing of spruce tea.

But, no matter what face Smoke and Shorty put on it, the situation was grim and serious. At least thirty fearful and impossible cases could not be taken from the beds, as the two men, with nausea and horror, learned, while one, a woman, died in Laura Sibley's cabin. Yet strong measures were necessary.

When the working gangs came in at noon they found decently cooked dinners awaiting them, prepared by the weaker members of their cabins under the tutelage and drive of Smoke and Shorty.

"That'll do," Smoke said at 3 in the afternoon. "Knock off. Go to your bunks. You may be feeling rotten now, but you'll be the better for it tomorrow. Of course it hurts to get well, but I'm going to get you well."

"Too late," Amos Wentworth sneered pallidly at Smoke's efforts. "They ought to have started in that way last fall."

"Come along with me," Smoke answered. "Pick up those two pails. You're not ailing."

From cabin to cabin the three men went, doling every man and woman with a full pint of spruce tea. Nor was it easy.

You might as well learn at the start that we mean business," Smoke stated to the first obdurate, who lay on his back groaning through set teeth. "Stand by, Shorty." Smoke caught the patient by the nose and tapped the solar plexus section so as to make the mouth gasp open. "Now, Shorty! Down she goes!"

And down she went, accompanied with unavoidable sputterings and struggles.

"We're covering this spruce tea route four times a day, and there are eighty of you to be dosed each time," Smoke informed Laura Sibley. "So we've no time to lose. Will you take it, or must I hold your nose?" His thumb and forefinger hovered eloquently above her. "It's vegetable, so you needn't have any qualms."

"I'll take it," she quavered "Hurry up!"

That night, exhausted as by no hard day of toil, Smoke and Shorty crawled into their blankets.

"I'm fairly sick with it," Smoke confessed. "The way they suffer is awful. But exercise is the only remedy I can think of, and it must be given a thorough trial. I wish we had a sack of new potatoes."

"Starvin, he can't wash no more dishes, Shorty said. "It hurts him so he swears his pain. I seen him sweat it. I had to put him back in the bunk he was that helpless."

"If only we had raw potatoes," Smoke went on. "The vital essential something is missing from that prepared stuff. The life has been evaporated out of it."

"An if that young fellow Jones in the first cabin don't croak before mornin I miss my guess."

"For heaven's sake be cheerful, Smoke chided.

In the morning not only was Jones dead, but one of the stronger men who had worked on the firewood squad was found to have bamred himself. A nightmare procession of days set in. For a week, steeling himself to the task, Smoke enforced the exercise and the spruce tea, and one by one and in twos and threes he was compelled to stock off the workers. As he was searing, exercise was the last thing in the world for scurvy patients The diminishing burial squad was kept steadily at work, and a surplus half dozen graves were always burned down and waiting One day Smoke saw the seeress entering Amos Wentworth's cabin and followed after her At the door he could hear her voice, whimpering and pleading

"Just for me," she was begging as Smoke entered. "I won't tell a soul."

Both glanced guiltily at the intruder, and Smoke was certain that he was on the edge of something, he knew not what, and he cursed himself for not having eavesdropped.

"Out with it!" he commanded harsh ly. "What is it?"

"What is what?" Amos Wentworth asked sullenly. And Smoke could not name what was what.

Grimmer and grimmer grew the situation. In that dark hole of a cabin the horrible death list mounted up. Each day, in apprehension, Smoke and Shorty examined each other's mouth for the whitening of the gums and mucous membrane—the invariable first symptom of the disease.

"I've quit," Shorty announced one evening. "I've been thinkin' it over an' I quit. I can make a go at slave drivin', but cripple-drivin is too much for my stomach. They go from bad to worse. They ain't twenty men I can drive to work. I told Jackson this afternoon he could take to his bunk He was gettin' ready to suicide. I could see it stickin' out all over him Exercise ain't no good."

"I've made up my mind to the same thing," Smoke answered.

The everlasting miracle of Went worth's immunity hardened Smoke. Why should he alone not have developed scurvy? Why did Laura Sibley hate him and at the same time whine and snivel and beg from him?

On several occasions Smoke made it a point to drop into Wentworth's cabin at mealtime. But one thing did he note that was suspicious and that was Wentworth's suspicion of him. Next he tried spending out Laura Sibley.

"Raw potatoes would cure everybody here," he remarked to the seeress. "I know it. I've seen it work before."

The fare of conviction in her eyes, followed by bitterness and hatred, told him the scent was warm.

"Why didn't you bring in a supply of fresh potatoes on the steamer?" he asked.

"We did. But coming up the river we sold them all out at a bargain at Fort Yukon. We had plenty of the evaporated kinds, and we knew they'd keep better. They wouldn't even freeze."

Smoke groaned. "Now, mightn't there have been a couple of odd sacks left—accidentally, you know, mislaid on the steamer?"

Shorty pricked up his ears, but he thought a trifle belatedly, then added. "We'll never found any."

"But mightn't there?" he persisted.

"How do I know?" she rasped angrily. "I didn't have charge of the commissary."

"And Amos Wentworth did," he jumped to the conclusion. "Very good. Now what is your private opinion—just between us two? Do you think Wentworth has any raw potatoes stored away somewhere?"

"No; certainly not. Why should he?" Struggle as he would with her Smoke could not bring her to admit the possibility.

That night, when the camp groaned and slept or groaned and did not sleep, Smoke went to Wentworth's unlighted cabin.

"Listen to me, Wentworth," he said "I've got a thousand dollars in dust right here in this sack. I'm a rich man in this country, and I can afford it. I think I'm getting touched. I'm on the fourth morning three corpses were burned

Then Smoke and Shorty together invaded Wentworth's cabin, throwing him out in the snow while they turned the interior upside down. Laura Sibley bobbled in and frantically joined them in the search

Though the very floor was dug up they discovered nothing

Another day passed, during which they kept a steady watch on Went worth's movements Several times when he started out, water bucket in hand, for the creek they casually approached the cabin, and each time he hurried back without the water.

"They've cached right here in his cabin," Shorty said. "But where? We sure overhauled it plenty." He stood up and pulled on his mittens. "I'm goin to find out if I have to pull the blame shack down a log at a time."

He glanced at Smoke, who, with an intent, absent face, had not heard him.

"What's eatin you?" Shorty demanded wrathfully.

"Just trying to remember something, Shorty."

"What's the game?"

"Watch me, that's all," Smoke barked. "I always told you, Shorty, that a deficient acquaintance with literature was a handicap, even in the Klondike Now, what we're going to do come out of a book I read it when I was a kid, and it will work. Come on!"

Several minutes later, under a pale gleaming, greenish aurora borealis, the two men crept up to Amos Wentworth's cabin Carefully and noiselessly they poured kerosene over the logs, extra drenching the door frame and window sash Then the match was applied and they watched the flaming oil gather headway. They drew back beyond the growing light and waited

They saw Wentworth rush out, stare wildly at the conflagration and plunge back into the cabin Scarcely a minute elapsed when he emerged, this time slowly, half doubled over, his shoulders burdened by a sack, heavy and unmistakable.

Smoke and Shorty sprang at him like a pair of famished wolves. They bit him right and left at the same instant. He crumpled down under the weight of the sack, which Smoke pressed over with his hands to make sure. Then he felt his knees clasped by Wentworth's arms as the man turned a ghastly face upward.

"Give me a dozen, only a dozen—half a dozen—and you can have the rest," he squalled. "Just half a dozen," he wailed. "Just half a dozen. I was going to turn them over to you—tomorrow. Yes, tomorrow. That was my idea. They're life! They're life! Just half a dozen!"

FARMER'S WIFE GETS STRENGTH

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wilton, Ont.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through the Change of Life. It helps me and I cannot praise it too highly. I was troubled with heat flashes and my head ached nearly so I could hardly walk to do my farm work. I saw in the newspapers your ad about the Vegetable Compound and thought to give it a trial. The first bottle gave me relief and I have told others what it does for me. I am willing for you to use my letter if you choose."—Mrs. D. B. Ferriss, Wilton, Ontario.

ARE YOU A MOTOR VIGILANTE?

BY ERWIN GREER

(President Greer College of Electrical and Automotive Trades, Chicago, Ill.)

Hardly a day passes but that the headlines of our newspapers scream of lives sacrificed on the altars of Carelessness and Thoughtlessness. Hardly a day passe, but that scores of editorial writers dip their pen into the caustic ink and purge new reforms. And hardly a day passes but that often over-zealous, yet conscientious, aldermen or councilmen present before their fellow legislators increasingly stringent and awe-inspiring ordinances designed to protect the lives of not only pedestrians, but of motorists as well.

Nothing—no psychological test or character analysis—will reveal true inwardness more quickly and with greater certainty than the automobile. And how it shows up the inanimate inconsiderate who, enthroned behind the steering wheel and feeling an eager engine beneath his feet, becomes inebriated with speed, poisoned with the mania of haste, stripped of the thin veneer of everyday courtesy and civilized conduct.

Think it over. How often have you observed the outrageous behavior of a driver, which made you say : "Somebody ought to report that fellow ; a man like that should not be allowed to drive a car." But you didn't report him. We do not like the idea of playing the part of the informer—and the driver sees us making the highway unsafe, not only for pedestrians, but also for motorists.

Are we, the 95 per cent of sane and safe motorists, going to see to it, ourselves, that a curb is put on the 5 per cent., or are we going remain in the enjoyment of what at present are our rights and privileges? We do we want to wait until outside influences step in and punish us, the innocent, together with the guilty?

In the early days of this country's history, when it became necessary to rid the community of undesirable elements, vigilantes saw to it that justice was sure and swift. The days of force have been superseded by an era of organized security in which the individual surrenders the lust of punishment to properly constituted authority.

Thus, what we need now is a body of modern vigilantes comprising the 95 per cent of decent, law-abiding, careful drivers, to work—through suitable laws, through persuasion and example, through reports, through volunteered testimony and in other ways toward the elimination of the unfit.

If we do fail to do these things somebody will soon do them for us and our motoring freedom will be over.

Let's do it ourselves.

Hunters and fishermen and all lovers of outdoor recreation will find plenty to interest them in the October issue of ROD AND GUN AND CANADIAN SILVER FOX NEWS, Canada's sporting magazine, which is just off the press. The contents of this issue cover a wide variety of sporting activities. There are two fine grizzly bear hunting stories, well written by two old timers, A. Bryan Williams and Joseph Hodgson. Other articles cover moose hunting, duck and geese hunting, all kinds of fishing, to say nothing of the regular features on outdoor lore, guns and ammunition, dogs and the silver fox industry, and three fine articles on bird life by well known authorities. In this issue there are also two good yarns by Harry M. Moore and E. A. Wood and another of Robert James' splendid series of Tales from the Wardroom Mess.

ROD AND GUN AND CANADIAN SILVER FOX NEWS is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

A Painful Accident.

A very painful and unfortunate accident happened to Mrs. Andrew Penny, of Empey Hill, on Monday evening of last week. She was at the barn and was in the act of fastening the cows in their stanchions, when one of the animals suddenly lurched backward, and a snap caught in her wedding ring, tearing the flesh from the finger and almost tearing the end of it. Mrs. Penny was immediately taken to Kingston General Hospital and it was found necessary to take the finger off back at the knuckle in the hand. We are pleased to say Mrs. Penny is getting along nicely.

ODESSA.

A wedding of much interest was solemnized on Saturday, Sept. 22nd, in the United Church parsonage, by the pastor, Rev. G. McQuade, when Mrs. Pearl Simmons and Mr. Frederick Vrooman were quietly married. After the ceremony they left for a short trip to Ottawa and other places of interest.

"When Jesus had thus said, He was troubled in spirit and testified and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you that one of you shall betray me. Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom He spake. Now there was, leaning on Jesus' bosom, one of His disciples whom Jesus loved ; Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom He spake. He then, lying on Jesus' breast saith unto Him, Lord who is it ? Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when He had dipped the sop, He gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon. And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly. Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him. For some of them thought because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things we have need of against the feast ; or, that he should give something to the poor. He then, having received the sop, went immediately out, and it was night." John 13 : 21-30.

The fight is on, but be not weary,
Be strong and in His might hold fast ;
If God be for us, His banner o'er us,
We'll sing the victor's song at last.

A BIBLE LOVER.

Curious Ideas Regarding the Dark Spots In the Moon's Disc.

There exist in various parts of the world curious ideas regarding the dark spots in the moon's disc. In the eastern part of Asia the spots are believed to be a rabbit or a hare. The Chinese, in particular, regard them as a hare sitting up and pounding rice in a mortar. Siamese take the same view. Others see in the moon a man and woman carrying a yoke.

Curiously, the North American Indians have almost the same superstition as the Chinese. On old monuments in Central America the moon appears as a jug or vessel, out of which an animal like a rabbit is jumping. South American Indians in the other hand, believe that a girl, who had fallen in love with the moon, sprang toward it, was caught and kept by it, and that it is her figure which is seen on the moon's face.

Samoa islanders regard the spots as representing a woman carrying a child. Other southern peoples have similar beliefs, the woman and child sometimes being transformed into an old woman bearing a burden on her back.

The Eskimos have an original superstition. They say that one day Uligo, the moon, chased his sister, the sun, in his wrath. Just as he was about to catch her, she suddenly turned round and threw a great handful of soot in his face, and escaped him; and of the soot he bears the traces to this day. The inhabitants of Northwestern India account for the moon's monthly disappearance by declaring that she is burnt up regularly and replaced by a fresh moon, explain the dark marks by saying that they are the ashes of the former moon.

Dakota Indians have it that the moon is eaten by a bear. The Polynesian superstition is that the souls of the dead feed on her. According to the Hottentots, the moon suffers from headache, and at the new moon she hides her head with her hand and covers her face from the gaze of the world.

WORK AMONG INDIAN INSANE.

Hospital at Canton, S.D., Doing Good Work for Unfortunate People.

There is only one Indian hospital for the insane in the world—and that is located at Canton, South Dakota. There are at present eighty-nine Indians, men, women and children, in this institution. The oldest person being cared for is past seventy-nine, and the youngest two years old. There are forty-five male and forty-four female patients. For over twenty years Dr. H. R. Hummer, formerly of Washington, has been the superintendent.

The institution overlooks the verdant valley and town site of the River Sioux. There are 327 acres of land which are divided into spacious lawns, gardens and grain fields. There are also twenty-four employes.

The Indian inmates are from all sections of the United States, but more from Oklahoma than from any other state.

There are moving pictures throughout the year. They cannot read script. The movies that interest them most are Western plays and slap-stick comedy. Through the winter season they have their dances—not the old-time Indian dances, for the Government is discouraging these and is supplanting them with the more modern steps, danced by the segregated sexes. Over these the radio furnishes the music.

HALF HOLIDAY PLAN.

Japanese Banks to Close on Saturday Afternoons.

At the petition of bank clearing houses, and over the protest of Stock Exchanges and Chambers of Commerce, the Ministry of Finance has approved of the plan to close all banks in Japan at noon on Saturday, and so grant bank employes this half-holiday. Those objecting to the scheme claim that it would hurt business, while those upholding it pointed to the fact that the Mitsui Trust Company, which voluntarily put it into practice some time ago, had actually increased business efficiency thereby.

The custom of observing Sunday as a holiday is a growing one in Japan; and now that of taking Saturday afternoon as a half-holiday is beginning to make headway. In the old days there were no periodical rest days in Japan. The only holidays observed were national or religious festivals, which came at irregular intervals during the year. In addition, two days annually, January 15 and July 16, were observed as holidays for the apprentices, who were allowed their time to themselves and were presented with new outfits of clothings by their masters.

The holidays of old Japan numbered about fifty-two in most parts of the country; but sometimes two months or more went by without a day of rest, and then there would be a three or five-day holiday. With the coming of the foreigner to Yokohama and Kobe sixty years ago the custom of Sunday observance was introduced. —Christian Science Monitor.

To Dig for Old City.

Much interest has been aroused at Gibraltar by the formation of a company for the purpose of excavating on the site of the ancient city of Cartela, in the neighborhood of the Rock.

While laying the foundations of houses at the spot last year a Spaniard named Evaristo Ramos, unearthed a marble sarcophagus and other Phoenician and Roman relics.

Prominent people interested in the new company, which has been granted exclusive rights, include the Marquis of Bute, who owns an estate in the vicinity, the Duke of Alba, and Senor J. A. Moreno, the director of the Spanish Banco del Credito.

Spelled With Trees.

The word "Ilion" will a few years hence be visible to aviators flying over that New York village. Five thousand pine trees are being set out in groups to form the word. Each letter will be outlined by a row of white birches along the outer edge of dark evergreens. The complete sign will occupy a 1,000-acre field and kept by it, and that it is her figure which is seen on the moon's face.

The Profit Lies in the Finish

IT PAYS to market cattle with the proper degree of finish. A qualify product always commands a premium and is readily saleable at a profitable price. If you have stock which needs a little more time for finishing, and the feed is scarce, see the local manager of the Standard Bank. It is a simple matter to arrange a loan to carry the stock until a favorable market warrants a profitable sale.

One of the loveliest drives in the district in which this column is read weekly, is along the old Indian trail that leads along the shores of the Bay of Quinte, through the old village of Bath. For untold centuries the Indians passed that way to The Carrying Place and in 1803 Asa Danforth completed the road that went on to York and still bears his name in Toronto. As you go through Adolphustown, and pass the church built by the descendants of the United Empire Loyalists, who worshipped in the old St. Paul's built by Rev. John Langhorn, and motoring between the hedges of purple and gold made by the tall purple asters and late goldenrod, come to the ferry by which you are taken across the bay to Glenora, where the windmills that gave it its old name are on the shore at the foot of the wooded cliff, on top of which is that wonder of the district, the Lake on the Mountain. Climb it if you will and see the splendid view of the five bays that form the Bay of Quinte, or motor along the shore to Picton, passing apple orchards and fields of ripe tomatoes being gathered and carried to the canning factories. How beautiful the bay looked in the September sunshine, with the maples flaming here and there, where Jack Frost's finger had touched them. ! In Picton we tried to buy apples, but were told none were for sale. Peaches, if liked, or pears, not grown in Canada. Niagara grapes, but no home grown fruit in the land of plenty, sometimes it is not the fault of the buyer when she comes home with purchases not grown in Canada . .

This is the season of colds. The first sign of a cold is a chill and the next often a burning sensation in the throat. Take a glass of cold water and dissolve in it a teaspoonful of baking soda and sip the contents slowly. Take half an hour or more to finish the glassful. Then fill it up again. Almost any cold will be conquered if taken in time, with this simple remedy, which is being recommended by hundreds of medical men. . . .

Good health is desired by us all, for ourselves, our children and our community. You know the old story of the woman who said to the young public health nurse, who was trying to show her that she was not following the laws of sanitation as we know them. "And you would tell me, would you, what I should do for the child that has buried seven ?" If she had known more, poor soul, she wouldn't have buried the little ones she loved. We remember the large families that grew to maturity in "the good old days," but we also remember the typhoid fever that was so common and that we seldom hear of now, and all the epidemics that we have been able to control, there are many other things we don't know that we could know if we took the trouble and here is where the societies, such as the Women's Institutes, could be so useful. Reports have to be read at conventions, but it would be better to cut some of them short and have such women as Dr. Helen MacMurcy or Dr. Edna Guest, give a heart to heart talk to mothers and the girls who will be the mothers of the next generation, than to hear long reports, no matter how full of interesting facts they are.

If you are fortunate enough to have old lace this is the time to wear it, for this is a lace season. The bride's wedding dress is enriched by lace and all her pretty things have lace trimming, often real. Why cannot we make lace in Canada ? A few women have the bobbins and the pillow upon which they made lace, in England. What a delightful thing it would be if the women who have the secret, would tell some of us and show us how to make the lace for which the European lace makers are famous. . . .

You will remember when we thought a cocktail must be very inspiring. Such cocktails are still with us, but here is one that is not intoxicating. Four peaches chopped into squares, balls of cantaloupe and squares of canned pineapple. Pour over the mixed fruit the tablespoons of lemon juice and two tablespoons of home made wine or grape juice Serve in small cocktail glasses, with a cherry on top of each glass.

What Color Is the Moon?

Another illusion has been swept away by the observations of scientists.

Most of us have heard so frequently of the "silvery moon" that we have taken its silveriness for granted. Now an astronomer declares our satellite is not "silver," but yellow.

It appears he once had the good fortune to observe a white star come very close to the crescent moon, when, as he described it to the British Astronomical Association, "the star looked like a globule of mercury on a dull brass ball."

The poets, however, will doubtless continue to sing of the "silvery moon." One of the greatest of our poets, Tennyson, sang of the white stars coming up one by one, whereas to the astronomer the stars show a wonderful variety of shades of color. Some very brilliant ones are red, others blue or bluish, and others a beautiful orange. And how many people have ever seen a green moon? The writer is one who has.

CANADIAN WOMEN'S WORK

BY LUCINDA.

One hundred and eleven British women are coming to Canada shortly to join their husbands. They are coming to a new land, under the auspices of the Overseas Settlement for British Women, supervised by the Church of England, which since 1919 has been doing much to bring to this country desirable women settlers, domestics, and women whose husbands have come across the seas as our forefathers did to make a home for them in one of the countries within the Empire. Now what are we, who have been born in Canada, of English, Irish, Scotch or French descent, going to do about these newcomers ? Are we going to stretch out to them welcoming hands ? Are we going to try to make them content with new conditions ? If we went to the old land and settled down in a small town, a village or country place, we would find many things very different to those to which we have been accustomed. Would we like it if the people thought us stupid when we showed our ignorance of their customs ? Unfortunately some of the immigration agents have given a wrong impression of life in Canada to the people who are considering migration to our country. They have said that very large wages are paid to any one wanting a place in a household. That it does not matter whether you can cook or not, that the mistress does her own cooking and that maids are allowed to go out every afternoon and most evenings and Sun. and so on. Now in some places they form, in connection with the churches or the Y.W.C.A., what is known as an Overseas Club, where girls who are strangers in the country can spend their evenings out and under the direction of some bright Canadian girls, gradually learn the ways of the country. We have been at Christmas sales given by an Overseas Club, to which the ladies in whose homes the girls were employed had contributed largely to the various tables and had come to the sale to buy the home cooking and the pretty fancy work. All this effort patiently made that will help to solve the problem of the newcomer.

MARRIAGES

Harshaw—Knight—On Saturday, Sept. 1st, 1928, in the church of St. Michael's and All Angels, by the Rev. J. B. Bonathar, Winifred May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Knight, Toronto, to Harold Lineau, younger son of Mrs. Harshaw and the late Archibald T. Harshaw, of Napanee.

DEATHS

Abbott — At Tyendinaga, on Wednesday, Sept. 26th, 1928, Albert Abbott, aged 66 years, 3 months, 14 days.

Edgar—At Kingston General Hospital, on Friday, Sept. 28th, 1928, Thos. Edgar, of Selby, aged 67 years.

McCabe—At Napanee, on Sunday, Sept. 30th, 1928, Selena Lidbury, beloved wife of Egerton R. McCabe, aged 72 years.

The Cat.

The saying that a cat has nine lives is a tribute to that animal's wonderful knack of escaping early death. Its body, flexible as steel, when it comes to falling, and its padded paws enable it to land safely after a fall that might kill a dog. Its spine is tougher than most animals, while its loosely fitting skin enables it to take many a nip with no injury to the actual body. The cat tribe, too, has a better balanced muscular system than most creatures, and so perfectly is its body under control that even when thrown from a height, a cat will generally manage to fall safely on those padded paws. The saying "nine lives," however, is only derived from the old superstition which regarded "9" and "7" as numbers having mystical significance. So they used to say it took nine tailors to make a man.

Wobbly Japan.

Japan undoubtedly holds the record for what the scientists call "seismic disturbances." In a normal year something over a thousand shocks are registered throughout the country. Most of them are very little ones, producing about as much agitation as a heavy motor lorry passing down the street—just a gentle rattling of the windows. The globe-trotter in Japan generally sleeps through his first earthquake, or, if he is half awakened by the tremors is not conscious of what has happened. But to the Japanese themselves, and residents, the next upheaval may be a really bad one, such as that which has overtaken Tokio and Yokohama.

Where there is an earthquake there is always fire, and in Japan it used to be said that the average life of the multitude of wood and paper houses of earlier days was seven years. The firemen's easiest way in those days was to pull down all the buildings in the neighborhood.

COSTLY PLEASURE YACHTS.

Two American Millionaires Pay Huge Sums for Boats.

Two pleasure yachts built for L. P. Fisher, president of the Cadillac Motor Co., and W. A. Fisher, president of the Fisher Body Corporation, cost these gentlemen $300,000 apiece.

Each boat has the luxurious appointments of a home and is combined with the high speed of smaller express cruisers. Two 8-cylinder Winton gasoline engines, rated at 500 horsepower each, are capable of driving each yacht at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

Each pleasure craft has been given a general outside finish of mahogany with interiors decorated in enamel. The layout provides for a lobby, an owner's suite, and private bath, and two additional staterooms with baths. The forward end is devoted to crew's quarters and mess, officers' quarters and the galley.

The bridge is protected by an enclosure forward with seats on either side of the track, and cabins are constructed of light mahogany and fitted with sashless windows of the automobile type, is located aft.

The auxiliary boats consist of a 12-foot dinghy and a 16-foot launch. The entire space behind the deckhouse and the cockpit in the after end are available for lounge rooms. A submerged deck is located forward with seating space on divans and chairs. Both cockpits are protected by glass windshields.

The yachts have been provided with the most capable radio effects, radio sets ever installed aboard private craft of this type. Electrical capstans, boat hoists, water and heating systems and refrigeration are part of the built-in equipment.

On the waters adjacent to Detroit, the owners are building a residence on boathouse and residence, in combination, at a cost of $1,600,000. An ingenious arrangement of coffer dams provided for draining off the water in which then become drydocks for winter storage of the boats.

END ANCIENT FEUD.

Peace Feast Enacted by Two Bedouin Tribes.

An impressive peace feast between two of the leading Bedouin tribes on the northern edge of the Huleli plain near the border where Palestine meets Syria has just been enacted with much ceremony, reports the Times. The ceremony was held in the presence of British and other officers of the district who successfully intervened to bring the long-standing feud with the resultant mutual raiding and theft which for nearly a decade has disturbed the peace and security of this area.

The feud was between two powerful families, that of Kemal Effendi, sheik of the Hamdoun, a prosperous leader, and the semi-Bedouin tribe of Hamdoun. Years ago members of the Hamdoun killed one of Kemal's father. Between these tribes since there has been enmity, jeopardizing the safety of all Hamdoun tribesmen if they came anywhere near Halsa territory.

The primitive but useful ceremony, the British believe will restore peace to the Huleli basin. There are years ago Joseph Trumpeldor, the Jewish Labor leader, and seven of his followers were slain defending their colony, Tel Tai, against the attack of Kemal Effendi's men.—Christian Science Monitor.

Not All Rubber.

Rubber automobile tires are really only about half rubber; the remainder is zinc oxide, sulphur, and carbon black.

HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

APPENDICITIS.

Appendicitis is a public health problem because the public need to be told of the early symptoms so that they may promptly secure proper treatment, which will greatly reduce the present death-rate from this disease.

In the majority of cases, appendicitis causes a condition that a physician will readily diagnose. Pain towards the centre of the abdomen, followed by nausea and vomiting, is usually the first symptom. The pain varies in intensity; it may be of a gripping character, later, the pain usually moves to the right lower part of the abdomen, and the abdominal muscles in that area become hard and tense. This is Nature's effort to protect the inflamed part.

Not any person—child or adult—has pain in the abdomen, even when the pain is not accompanied by nausea or vomiting, the family physician should be sent for at once. The only satisfactory treatment for appendicitis is immediate operation. The chance of recovery practically depends upon the interval of time between the onset of symptoms and the operation. To delay in securing prompt treatment is to gamble with life itself.

One thing in particular that will do a tremendous amount of harm and that will, in many cases, greatly lessen or even prevent the chance of recovery, and that is the use of a purgative or laxative.

Never person, when suffering from abdominal pain, should take or be given a purgative or laxative unless ordered to do so by a physician. The loss of bowel movements is not going to do any harm, whereas the activity stimulated by a purgative, when nature has kept the bowel quiet on account of an inflamed appendix, may be disastrous.

Abdominal pain is sufficient reason for calling the family physician.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered by letter. Questions as to the diagnosis and treatment will not be answered.

ERINSVILLE.

The farmers in this vicinity are very busy harvesting the second crop of alfalfa, from which they expect to get a considerable amount of seed. The threshing is also in full swing and all grains are turning out well.

There are still a few guests at the Palmetto, but all the cottages are closed for this season.

Dr. A. and Mrs. Flynn and baby, and Mrs. Effie Flynn, are guests of Mrs. C. D. Drumgoole.

Miss Talmire, of Picton, spent a few days with friends.

Miss Anna Hopkins has gone to Kingston to attend College.

The recent rains have enabled the farmers to plough, and a great deal is being done.

Large quantities of hogs, sheep and cattle are being shipped from this station.

WILTON.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Martin, a son.

Mrs. Byrton Caton and son, Walter, motored from Edmonton and are spending a few days with relatives and friends here.

The United church choir is practising for the anniversary service.

Miss F. Alkenbrack spent last week-end at her home in Camden East.

Mrs. Jas. Jackson has returned to her home at Verulchar, after spending a few days with Mrs. R. Jackson.

Some of the Wilton ladies attended a meeting of the Women's Institute at Violet.

SMOKE BELLEW

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate

"Where's the other sack?" Smoke bluffed.

"I ate it up," was the reply, untinged with peachably honest. "That sack's all that's left. Give me a few. You can have the rest."

"Ate 'em up!" Shorty screamed. "A whole sack! An' them geesers dyin' for want of 'em! This for you! An' this! An' this! An' this! You swine! You hog!"

There was no sleep in camp that night. Hour after hour Smoke and Shorty went the rounds, doling the life renewing potato juice, a quarter of a spoonful at a dose, into the poor pinched mouths of the population. And through the following day while one slept the other kept up the work.

There were no more deaths. The most awful cases began to mend with an immediacy that was startling.

"Nary a potato," Shorty told the whining, begging Wentworth. "You ain't even touched with scurvy. You got outside a whole sack, an' you're loaded against scurvy for twenty years. Knowin' you, I've come to understand God. I always wondered why he let Satan live. Now I know. He let him live just as I let you live. But it's a cryin' shame, just the same."

"A word of advice," Smoke told Wentworth. "These men are getting well fast. Shorty and I are leaving in a week, and there will be nobody to protect you when these men go after you. There's the trail. Dawson's eighteen days' travel."

"Gentlemen, I beg of you, listen to me," Wentworth whined. "I'm a stranger in this country. I don't know the trail. Let me travel with you. I'll give you $1,000 if you'll let me travel with you."

"Sure," Smoke grinned maliciously, "if Shorty agrees."

"Who? Me?" Shorty stiffened for a supreme effort. "I ain't nobody. Wood ticks ain't got nothin' on me when it comes to humility. I'm a worm, a maggot, brother to the pollywog an' child of the blowfly. I ain't afraid or ashamed of nothin' that creeps or crawls. But travel with that mistake of creation—go 'way, man! I ain't proud, but you turn my stomach."

And Amos Wentworth went away, alone, dragging a sled loaded with provisions sufficient to last him to Dawson. A mile down the trail Shorty overtauled him.

"Come here to me," was Shorty's greeting. "Come across. Fork over. Cough up."

"I don't understand," Wentworth quavered, shivering from recollection of the two beatings, hand and foot, he had already received from Shorty.

"That thousand dollars, d'ye understand that? That thousand dollars gold Smoke bought that measly potato with. Come through."

And Amos Wentworth passed the gold sack over.

"Hope a skunk bites you an' you get howlin' hydrophoby," were the terms of Shorty's farewell.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Flutter in Eggs.

IT was in the A. C. company's big store at Dawson that Lucille Arral beckoned Smoke Bellew over to the dry goods counter.

Smoke obeyed her call with alacrity. The man did not exist in Dawson who would not have been flattered by the notice of Lucille Arral, the singing soubrette of the tiny stock company that performed nightly at the Palace Opera House.

"Things are dead," she complained, with pretty petulance. "There hasn't been a stampede for a week. There's no dust in circulation. There's always standing room now at the opera house. And there hasn't been a mail from the outside for two whole weeks. In short, this burg has crawled into its cave and gone to sleep. We've got to do something. It needs livening, and you and I can do it. I've broken with Wild Water, you know."

Smoke caught two almost simultaneous visions. One was of Joy Gastell, the other was of himself, in the midst of a bleak snow stretch under a cold arctic moon, being pot shotted with accurateness and dispatch by the aforesaid Wild Water. Smoke's reluctance at raising excitement with the aid of Lucille Arral was too potent for her to miss.

"I'm not thinking what you are thinking at all, thank you," she chided, with a laugh and a pout. "Take it from me, Mr. Smoke Bellew, I'm not going to make love to you, and if you dare to make love to me Wild Water will take care of your case. You know him. Besides, I—I haven't really broken with him. Wild Water thinks I've broken with him, don't you see?"

"Well, have you, or haven't you?"

"I haven't—there! But it's between you and me in confidence."

"Where do I come in, stalking horse or fall guy?"

"Neither. You make a pot of money, we put across the touch on Wild Water and cheer Dawson up, and, best of all and the reason for it all, he gets disciplined. He needs it. He's—well, the best way to put it is he's too turbo[illegible]. He broke one last night again. Sowed the floor of the M. & M. with gold dust—all of a thousand dollars. You've heard of it, of course."

"Yes; this morning. But still I don't get you."

"Listen. He was too turbulent. I broke our engagement, and he's going around making a noise like a broken heart. Now we come to it. I like eggs."

"But what have eggs and appetite got to do with it?" Smoke demanded.

"Everything. I like eggs. There's only a limited supply of eggs in Dawson."

"Sure. Slavovitch's restaurant has most of them. Ham and one egg, $3; ham and two eggs, $5. That means $2 an egg, retail."

"He likes eggs too," she continued. "But that's not the point. I like them. I have breakfast every morning at 11 o'clock at Slavovitch's. I invariably eat two eggs." She paused impressively. "Suppose, just suppose, somebody corners eggs."

She waited, and Smoke regarded her with admiring eyes, while in his heart he backed with approval Wild Water's choice of her.

"You're not following," she said.

"Go on," he replied. "I give up. What's the answer?"

"Stupid! You know Wild Water. When he sees I'm languishing for eggs, and I know his mind like a book and I know how to languish, what will he do? Why, he'll just start stampeding for the man that's got the corner in eggs. He'll buy the corner, no matter what it costs.

"Picture: I come into Slavovitch's at 11 o'clock. Wild Water will be at the next table. He'll make it his business to be there. 'Two eggs, shirred,' I'll say to the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral, the waiter will say, 'they ain't no more eggs.' Then up speaks Wild Water in that big bear voice of his, 'Waiter, six eggs and boiled.' And the waiter says, 'Yes, sir,' and the eggs are brought. Picture: Wild Water looks sideways at me, and I look like a particularly indignant fickle and summon the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral,' he says, 'but them eggs is Mr. Wild Water's. You see, mine, he owns 'em.' Picture: Wild Water, triumphant, doing his best to look unconscious while he eats his six eggs.

"Another picture: Slavovitch himself bringing two shirred eggs to me and saying: 'Compliments of Mr. Wild Water, miss.' What can I do? What can I possibly do but smile at Wild Water? And then we make up, of course, and he'll consider it cheap if he has been compelled to pay $10 for each and every egg in the corner."

"Go on, go on!" Smoke urged. "At what station do I climb on to the chechoo cars or at what water tank do I get thrown off?"

"Ninny! You make that corner in eggs. You start in immediately, today. You can buy every egg in Dawson for $3 and sell out to Wild Water at almost any advance. And then, afterward, we'll let the inside history come out. The laugh will be on Wild Water. His turbulence will be some subdued. You and I share the glory of it. You make a pile of money. And Dawson wakes up with a grand ha, ha!"

"Hey, Shorty!" Smoke called across the main street to his partner and crossed over. "I want you to do me a favor."

"Sure," Shorty said gallantly. "What is it? Let her rip."

"I want you to buy eggs for me."

"Sure, an' Florida water an' talcum powder, if you say the word. Look here, Smoke, if you want to go in for high livin' you go an' buy your own eggs."

"I am going to buy, but I want you to help me to buy. You go right straight to Slavovitch's. Pay as high as $3, but buy all he's got."

"Three dollars!" Shorty groaned. "An' I heard tell only yesterday that he's got all of 700 in stock! Twenty-one hundred dollars for ben fruit. Say, Smoke, I'd sure do anything for you. If you had a cold in the head an' was layin' with both arms broke I'd set by your bedside day an' night an' wipe your nose for you, but I'll be everlastin'ly d—d if I'll squander twenty-one hundred good iron dollars on ben fruit for you or any other two legged man."

"They're not your dollars, but mine, Shorty. It's a deal! I have on. What I'm after is to corner every blessed egg in Dawson, in the Klondike, on the Yukon. You've got to help me out. I haven't the time to tell you of the inwardness of the deal. I will afterward and let you go half on it if you want to. But the thing right now is to get the eggs. Now, you hustle up to Slavovitch's and buy all he's got. And then keep on. Nose out every egg in Dawson and buy it. Understand? Buy it!"

FEMININE DRESS IN CHINA.

Style Is More Exacting Than Even for the Women of America.

"Why, I thought all the Chinese women dressed exactly alike," said a woman on a recent visit to China. Style is more exacting for the women of China than even for the women of this continent, says a writer in the New York Sun. There are subtle differences known to every woman of fashion in China, and they change more often than the usual seasonal changes of women's styles in this country.

But the changes are difficult for a Westerner to note. They include such details as a half-inch length of skirt or a slightly different cut sleeve or a particular design of material for a special month of the year. So that for the Chinese to be in style requires more money than for the usual American to be up to date.

The materials for the Eastern women are often far more expensive for them than our materials. Elaborate silks and embroideries, heavy brocades and furs, with just the proper ornaments. And if you are quite wealthy often your small buttons on the side of your "shaam" will be of jade.

The outer garments is made in a blouse-like effect, usually of embroidered silk, with sloping front and back. Sometimes it has a high standup collar and sometimes a lower collar, but always some type of collar, for the Chinese cannot understand the Western love of low neck. The name of this outer garment is called a "shaam." With it is worn a skirt on a narrow band from the waist. Night and day clothes are exactly the same pattern.

In the old days the schoolgirls used to wear trousers, called "foos," instead of skirts. But with the coming of the National Government this costume was prohibited the older schoolgirls, much to their sorrow, for they appreciated the freedom of action which it gave them. Now they are only worn in place of bloomers or knickers for physical exercise.

Fashions in dressing the hair must always present a slicked appearance. Among the young the bob is gaining in style. And the most fashionable bob is a part in the middle or side with bangs. It is just a little too severe for the Chinese idea of beauty.

SURGERY 5,000 YEARS AGO.

Prehistoric Man Suffered Severely From Diseases.

Five thousand years ago prehistoric man suffered severely from diseases, but even in those distant days skilful surgeons tried to relieve their sufferings, says Dr. John Nihlen, a well-known Swedish archaeologist, who has recently made some interesting excavations in the Swedish island of Gotland, in the Baltic, on the site of the ancient fishing village called "the town of ruins and roses."

Dr. Nihlen, on examining a number of skeletons and human bones, found numerous abnormal conditions, excrescences and deformities, showing that this prehistoric race must have suffered severely from rheumatism and similar painful diseases, probably brought on to a great extent by the hard climatic conditions, and perhaps partly due to the exclusive meat diet which also has been found to cause deformation of the jaws.

It also appears that the Swedes of those days must have suffered very much from decayed teeth and toothache. Another disease which evidently haunted these communities was rickets, and frequent epidemics must have ravaged the population. The death rate amongst children in those days must have been very great, and the average lifetime seems to have been only forty to fifty years.

A most interesting discovery resulting from the examination of these human remains is that surgeons existed at this period, and that they performed frequent and sometimes difficult operations. Thus, neat round holes were discovered in several skulls, showing that the ancient surgeons successfully used the art of trepanning. In performing this delicate operation the surgeon used an ordinary stone auger or drill, and it appears that in most cases the patient survived the operation.

The Blue Baboon.

A grotesque but humane method of repulsing wild animals is being practiced in Kenya Colony, Africa. Elephants, hippopotami, bushpigs and baboons were surprised recently when they found among their number a queer animal resembling a baboon, except that it had all its hair shaved off and wore a coat of bright blue.

They were so startled that they no longer return to raid the colonists and the idea is recommended by the official who captured the baboon and released it after transforming its appearance with a razor and paint brush.

SUMERIAN JEWELLERY.

Ladies' Ornaments of 4,500 Years Ago Exhibited.

The royal treasures of Ur of the Chaldees, found by C. Leonard Woolley and his associates, have been on exhibition in England for the first time, and attracted great public interest at the British Museum. Among visitors amazement at the artistry and design of the articles is general, and some visiting jewellers have remarked that the present age has little in this respect to teach the Sumerians.

The collection includes the beautiful helmet of King Mes-Kalam-Dug and the headdress of Queen Shub-ad. Both are of gold and exquisitely fashioned. The exhibits show that women's hair at this time was worn coiled into a bun at the back. There are a number of vanity boxes not greatly different from those sold to-day in large jewellery shops.

A woman's cloak belonging to the queen gives an idea of fashions at that time. It is a beaded garment opening on the right side, and with a fringe of bugle beads at the bottom, to which are fastened gold rings. It was held together by a large gold pin.

One twist of fashion in the course of time is shown by the fact that earrings were in the early days a male fashion and some very fine specimens are shown. There are also a number of the gold and silver mascots which were fastened to chariot harness. Most of the non-royal objects shown date from the Sargonid period, about 2700-2600 B.C. These include rings, bracelets and frontlets, mostly made of gold.

ALL DONE BY WIRELESS.

Marvels of To-day Are Nothing Compared With Those Yet to Come.

Broadcasting now takes such a prominent place in our home life that many people are apt to regard it as practically the beginning and the end of modern radio development, whereas, of course, it is only one of a host of wireless wonders, says R. F. Tillman, F.R.S.A., A.M.I.R.E., in London Answers.

One indication of the marvels that are being gradually fashioned by scientists is the recent report that experts of the General Electric Co. of the United States have invented a valve capable of producing very short wireless waves, thus bringing us nearer the time when it will be possible to transmit light and power by wireless.

Then, television has now arrived, and photographs, finger-prints, and signatures can be sent through the ether. Cinema films have also been wirelessed over distances up to 3,000 miles.

To-day, too, it is possible to control a pilotless airplane by wireless successfully, causing it to rise from the ground, take a lengthy flight, and return safely. Battleships, torpedoes, motor-cars, and machinery of all kinds can also be controlled successfully. The directions are sent by a secret combination of different wavelengths, on the principle of a letter-lock, thus preventing interference by other transmitters.

Wireless can also totally destroy a thin wire at a distance of a few feet without any connection whatever, and lamps can be lighted and extinguished over a distance of a mile.

There are numerous other uses to which wireless can be applied to-day. A New York doctor claims to achieve successful operations by means of a surgical knife using radio currents.

All branches of radio science will develop steadily, and it is quite certain that the wireless marvels of the present day are nothing compared with those yet to come.

MOTHERHOOD OF THE SEA.

Furnishes Rain, Regulates Winds, and Tempers Seasons.

What a prodigious fact is the ocean! It is three times as spacious as all the continents together. But the ocean has a powerful appeal to our imagination beyond its mere breadth and depth—the motherhood of the sea is impressive. Day by day she furnishes the rain, regulates the winds, and tempers the seasons in order to make the continents habitable, writes Ernest Ingersoll in the Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star. In her bosom originated life, and thence she shared it with the land; nevertheless, with all her liberality, the parental sea let the prize conservator. You may find to-day beneath her secret waves, living examples of animal forms just like those recorded as fossils in the very oldest leaves of her rock-records.

Dip a bucket of water from the North Sea and your microscope will discover in it the very same sort of animalcules as those whose tests glisten in the white cliffs along its English shore, although the bolsted chalk was once the bottom of the Cretaceous Sea—many millions of years ago.

Dredge almost anywhere, and you will get living crinoids and lamp-shells in a form unchanged since long before the time of the chalk. Such facts force on our minds the stability that endures amid mobility. It is impossible in a world made like ours that the ocean should remain quiet—a stagnant sea is unthinkable; yet with all its ceaseless movement its entrance and status remain virtually the same. That is the secret of its conservation. Living creatures change form as external influences vary, and adaptations of structure, or disease, must follow. In the ocean, conditions vary so slightly that they hardly affect anything; living in the all but immutable water.

What a plentitude of life the ocean carries, classified in layers according to adaptability to a lesser or greater depth. The surface-layer swarms with minute lowly creatures, and larger ones that feed upon them; and in contrast with the land this assemblage becomes more dense the greater the distance from the Equator. Hence, seals and whalebone whales that feed in this "plankton" are more plentiful in Arctic than in tropic waters. Sustaining all this host, as food for its simplest members, are the floating vegetable atoms. Above that basis, all live by devouring each other, especially in the eggs and the infant stages; hence an amazing fecundity, diminishing with the rise in the scale of predatory power.

ROSES OF BULGARIA.

They Are Very Small But Are Cultivated for Their Fragrance.

Two specimens of the flower are cultivated in the renowned valley of roses in Bulgaria, whence the world's perfumeries get most of their essence. They are the rose alba or white rose, and the rose damascena, a red rose which gives the best essence, and therefore is mostly cultivated.

The Bulgarian rose is small, having a diameter of only about one and one-quarter inches. Neither is it striking for its color or for its brilliance, or its form. It is loose and fluffy, not compact. But it holds all its primitive perfume, something which cannot be said for European and American roses cultivated for their beauty at the expense of the cent.

That is why Bulgaria is famous for the essence of its roses. During 1927 Bulgaria produced nearly 10,000,000 kilograms (about 22,000,000 tons) of roses. Essence is derived in the proportion of one kilogram, or two and one-fifth pounds, from 5,500 pounds of red, or from 8,800 pounds of white roses.

A Mistake.

One day, Mrs. Gladstone was discussing with some ladies a knotty problem, while her husband was upstairs busy in his study.

As the discussion proceeded, one of the ladies exclaimed with a sigh—"Well, there's One above who knows it all."

"Yes," said Mrs. Gladstone, "William will be down in a minute, and he will tell us all about it."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

New Idea In Tooth Brush.

Instead of the usual bristles, a toothbrush now on the market has wedge-shaped rubber "fingers" from which foreign matter is easily removed, insuring cleanliness at all times. They will not come out and are also said to have a bonedicial effect on the gums.
